

NEW LENOX CITIZEN DISSATISFIED
WITH NEW SCHOOL SETUP

The "Pied Piper" has passed through New Lenox. What a tragic thing for the school children of the south side. Their parents have failed to pay the piper and have sealed the doom of their own children. "Sold them down the river", to use the modern phrase. Can we as south siders face our children for the unholy thing we've done? Wake up, Southsiders.

We are allowing the Northsiders to take our school tax money for the sole purpose of providing a spacious play ground and fine building for their children, and their children only, while our children play in the streets. What more dishonorable thing could we have done?

Your school directors talk of making their north side site a consolidated school but stop and think how hopeless the accomplishment of this would be. Do you think the citizens of our outlying territory are going to permit this when they have no voice in the location. Our recent election has proven that the people on the north side and the rural areas are smarter than we, and that we south siders are just plain dumb. Where will the play ground that our south side children need come from? We can never hope for it unless we do something and do it quickly.

The north side children need a play ground as do our southside children but how are our kids going to use one stuck away up there in the woods? A consolidated or community school, whichever is most advantageous, centrally located east or west of New Lenox would provide a play ground for all and solve the question.

It is true that the northsiders have to cross a railroad and a highway but in some instances the south side children have to cross three unprotected railroad crossings and travel on a busy highway to boot. No matter where the school is, some will have to cross railroads and highways but let's have playgrounds for both sides.

Did you, both northsiders and south siders, stop to think that your school board is asking you to pay $568.18 an acre for the land that has always been worthless for farming? Land that has never been worth more than $50.00 an acre for anything. You are diving into the water before you know how deep it is. You are making as tragic a mistake as our present school turned out to be. Thoughtlessness on the part of some people, selfishness, on the part of others while the children pay, the bitter price.

I have no children in grade school now and never will have again, but my love for all children is such that I want them all to have equal opportunity. I want the child from the most remote farm to have the same opportunity for education as the child living next door to the school.

Can you tell me a better way to spend your money than for your children's education. I would not sacrifice the opportunities of one group of children for the benefit of another group. Not even if my children were involved. Reflect both sides on the atrocity you have committed and correct it before it is too late. Explain the advantages of the consolidated or community school, to your rural neighbors and let them have a voice in the location and construction of it. You will find that they will go along with you when they know that their children will have better advantages as well as yours.

The present school board wants to further weaken an already weak school system. A school system already weak because they cannot pay the salaries to which the teachers are entitled. They see only glory for themselves and a chance to spend someone else's money foolishly. Let's get down to earth and do something sensible for once.

New Lenox, now that it is incorporated, needs a centrally located town hall. Our present school building would be ideal for this. There is ample room for our library, fire department, jail, local court house, office space, municipal garage and an auditorium for public community meetings, all housed under one roof, centralizing and minimizing expense. A golden opportunity if only people can be made to see it.

Some north siders will object because it, as a community center, is not on the north side of town. For myself I would not care if it was as long as we had it for that purpose. Would it be costly? Yes, right now, yes. But over a period of years, no. Cheaper than a building here for the fire department, another building there for the library, a building somewhere else to house our road equipment, or a rented building for our town gatherings and elections. Oh! what an opportunity.

I only wish that I owned the land, or had the money to buy a suitable site for a consolidated or community school so that I could give it to the children. What greater monument could I leave for posterity.

You cannot pick up a Readers Digest and not find an article where some community has not done some wise and outstanding thing for themselves and their children. Let's put our town in the Readers Digest.

Think it over New Lenox townspeople. This is a crusade for your children.

H. Lorenz, Invalid For 5 Years, Died Saturday

Mr. Herman Lorenz, 75, who has been confined to his bed for the past 5½ years following a paralytic stroke, passed away in the home of his daughter Mrs. Edward Schmidt in Mokena last Saturday afternoon. He has been a patient sufferer.

Mr. Lorenz was born January 21, 1871 in Germany. He came to this country with his parents when a lad of 9 years. After living a year in Chicago they moved to the locality of Mokena where they farmed.

April 4, 1900 he was united in marriage with Miss Emma Speaker. Together they farmed in this locality until 1923 when they retired and moved to Joliet where they lived for 13 years. They returned to Mokena to live and three years ago Mr. and Mrs. Lorenz moved in with their daughter Clara and husband, where he passed away.

Surviving beside his widow are three daughters: Mrs. Schmidt, Mrs. Alice Homering of Mokena, and Mrs. Carrie Evans of Joliet. Three sons, Albert of Orland, Herman Jr., of Mokena and Roy of Joliet; two brothers, Henry of New Lenox and Ernest of Hammond, Ind.; two sisters, Mrs. Wm. Penrose and Mrs. Phillip Werner of Joliet; and 10 grand children.

COURT FREEZES FIRM'S
ASSETS ON WIFE'S PLEA

A temporary injunction preventing Hilbert Strassenburg, Mokena trucker, from disposing of any of his assets filed yesterday by his wife, Minnie, was issued yesterday in Circuit Court by Judge C. D. Henry.

The petition for injunction accompanied Mrs. Strassenburg's charges that the defendant has been guilty of adultery. She claims that when she found her husband in the home of another woman Dec. 21 he "struck and beat her a dozen times." She still bears the marks to this beating, the plaintiff says.

The bill alleges further that Strassenburg has a substantial interest in a trucking concern known as Strassy's Service System, which has a fleet of 12 trucks valued at a total of between $60,000 and $70,000. He also owns two cars, the plaintiff asserts, worth $3,500, has large sums of money and government bonds; a home in Mokena worth $15,000 and several thousand dollars in a joint bank account.

The injunction ordered the defendant not to sell or dispose of any of his property during the pendency of the case. The First National Bank of Grant Park, codefendant in the injunction petition, was also enjoined from turning over any deposits or contents of the defendant's safe deposit box.

Mrs. Strassenburg's complaint asks the court to award her temporary support money and to assess the costs of the suit against her husband.

The couple were married September 4, 1937 and separated December 30.

A. W. O. L. Boys
Returned Home

Three Mokena high school boys ran away from home early Monday morning and started out to see the world. They were: James Gillett, 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harley Gillett; Gordon Hughes, 15, whose father was a former Mokena resident and now lives in Joliet and Robert Cooney, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Cooney, just recently moved to Mokena from Chicago.

The boys took the rock island to Joliet and from there walked the railroad tracks southwest and while crossing a field near Streator, Ill., a farmer saw them and questioned them if they were not the boys from Mokena whom the police were looking for. It was not very long before the police had them and brought them back to Joliet where they were kept in the county jail until the next morning when their parents came for them.

Gordon Hughes, who has been staying with Mrs. Cooney's mother, Mrs. Kate Horras, after his father moved to Joliet, was turned over to Mrs. Cooney after she said she would be responsible for him, until the authorities could locate his father. The boys must report each Thursday to the Will County Truant officers. They are back in school now, and have decided the lark was not so good, as Gillett and Hughes got wet when they slipped and fell into a creek and have had colds at present.

FORMER NEW LENOX MAN
NOW HEAD OF RELATIONS
BUREAU IN GERMANY

The following is a letter written by Mrs. Ernest Flotow, wife of Dr. Flotow former principal of the New Lenox Grade school who is now teaching in Germany to Mrs. Robert Gillette, president of the New Lenox P.T.A.

Mrs. Flotow who at present is residing with relatives in Ewing, Illinois plans to leave for Germany to join her husband this Spring. The letter: Ewing, Illinois.

Dear Mrs. Gillette:

I was so happy over the idea that the P.T.A. was considering making up a box of used clothing to send to Dr. Flotow to be distributed to the most needy children in his area. I intended to stay longer at the reception that evening as I really wanted to talk a little with the teachers and some more with you, but Mae Smith, who was with me, got sick and we had to leave right away. We drove on over to River Forest and spent the night with a friend of mine there who is a nurse, and she had Mae feeling all right by noon the next day, then that afternoon we drove to Galesburg to my sisters and visited her until Wednesday about 10:30 when we left for home again.

My main purpose in being up there at that time was to contact some of the publishers of text books, to see if they would send some sample sets of text books to Dr. Flotow. The teacher in Germany don't even have a set of books to use as a guide in teaching. Two of the publishers said they would send a complete set of sample books for every grade. Some of the others are sending complete sets of arithmetic English books, readers, etc., through the various grades. So I felt that my trip was very successful. But there are so many towns and so many schools in his area that it will take a lot of copies of books for every teacher to have a set.

A few weeks ago they went to the Red Cross, canteens, and libraries and collected all the old papers, magazines, books and had it all pulped. About 60 per cent of it comes out suitable for text books, so that is now being made up.

He feels that we can't do much in the way of teaching democracy and our way of thinking and doing things as long as we let them suffer from hunger and cold. The German homes and schools are still with out heat, they haven't nearly enough food to keep them from going hungry, nor enough clothing to keep them half warm. They are just desperate for shoes. Some of the children are still barefoot and the others have only rags tied around their feet.

The occupation government is supposed to take care of all these things, but even though we read and hear of all the food, etc. that is going abroad, and all that is collected for European relief—yet there just isn't enough as yet to go around—or some gets into the wrong channels. In the meantime, it's the poor little children who are not in any way to blame for war that suffer most.

Some of the churches here are taking pre-Christmas collections which

Local Boy Signed

The desire of a young boy back lot ball player was realized recently when he was offered a contract by the New York Yankees, which he has signed and is awaiting further instructions.

He is Arnold Landek, Jr., 22 son of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Landek, Sr., of Andres, a farming territory south of Frankfort.

Landek, as a young lad played ball on the vacant lots, was on the team when he attended high school at Peotone, then made the Will County Farm Bureau team at Manhattan, and while in the Navy one year, played on a team while at Appleton, Wis.

Landek is a pitcher which position he has always played. He has just completed his first semester at Wesleyan college at Bloomington, Ill., and will leave early in March for either Kansas City or Ventura, Cal. His many friends extend him best wishes for a steady climb in the baseball world and expect to see his name high in that field some day. He plans to make professional baseball his life work.

FORMER ATOMIC RESEARCH
AREA AGAIN PLAYGROUND

All restrictions will be removed on the 1,000 acres of forest preserves in Palos Hills surrounding the government atomic research project, except for the 20 acres the government will continue to use for up to ten years under a contract approved last week by the Cook County board.

This was disclosed Friday by Superintendent Charles G. Sauers of the forest preserves, who said a farm fence surrounding the inner 100 acres would be removed before May. The 10 foot fence around the actual buildings will remain and guards will probably discourage too close curiosity, he said.

Otherwise the area, containing four big picnic areas and riding trails, will be open to the public as before the 1,000 acres were taken over in 1942, Sauers said. It has been tested and found negative for radio-activity.

The contract, providing for payment of $63,000 by the government for restoration of the Palos club house, parking areas and trails when it moves out within 10 years, is "an intelligent solution of a very difficult problem," Sauers said.

"It does not interfere with proposed atomic research and at the same time provides within time limits the forest preserve district shall be freed of the activity which is improper and illegal," he wrote to the county board. "We have got to wait until the 'pile' wears out gradually anyway. The government proposes to go elsewhere in the area and develop a big new research plant which has to be in connection with the university."

Last summer the war department, just before control of atomic energy was put in civilian hands, asked the permanent lease of 253 acres in Palos. This was refused by the advisory committee on land purchases.

They will use for purchasing packages of food to send directly to Dr. Flotow. They feel that then they will be sure the food will be used for the right purpose. Give my greetings to all.

Sincerely, Opal Flotow.

P.S.: Dr. Flotow takes the boxes of clothing right to the schools where it seems to be needed most and the teachers fit the clothing on the children right there.

That way the children who need it most get it and it has no chance of getting into the black market rings.

The only thing they ask is that the clothing be clean since the children need it so badly they put it right on and wear it.

Last Sunday the fox hunt was not largely attended, due presumably to the cold weather. There will be another hunt this Sunday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock starting at Yunkers tavern.

ARRIVAL OF TRIPLET LAMBS

Triplet lambs were born to a ewe owned by Mr. and Mrs. Albert Urbach at Tinley Park last week. Two of the lambs are doing well but one of them is keeping Mrs. Urbach busy as it has to be fed with a bottle.

At the village board meeting of Tinley Park held Feb. 3rd, a committee was appointed to make plans for a new village building which will house the Village Hall, Police department and Fire Department.

Those serving on this committee are: Edmund Moss and Wm. Mancke from the Fire Department; Fred Hick, representing the Business men; Wm. Kopp, representing the citizens at large and Raymond Jacobs from the Village Board. They will submit plans for the new combination building to the village board for consideration.

Another big step which the village board is taking, is that of caring for the sewage. Plans are nearly completed for a large sewage system and treating plant to be located in Tinley Park.

A special meeting of the Board will be held Monday, Feb. 17 when they will pass a new zoning ordinance and will consider passage of a new water ordinance.

Tinley Park is growing, and as soon as material is available for building, many new homes are being planned, which will mean an increase in population.

SEWERS OF 19 COUNTRY
TOWNS ARE CONDEMNED

Primitive and unhealthful conditions of sewage disposal were found in 19 of Cook county's 89 municipalities, as well as in unincorporated areas, the Chicago-Cook county health survey reported this week.

These 19 communities are: Alsip, Chicago Ridge, Crestwood, East Hazelcrest, Glenwood, Golf, Hodgkins, Justice, Markham, Mount Prospect, Orland Park, Palos Park, Richton Park, Robbins, Stone Park, Tinley Park, Wheeling, Willow Springs, and Worth. All in the group having a total population of 13,523, lack municipal systems to collect domestic sewage.

As in most of the unincorporated area settlements, sewage disposal is the problem of each home owner. And methods in use range from septic tanks and cesspools to outdoor privies.

In addition, according to the report, Lemont and South Chicago Heights do not provide any treatment of sewage, which is dumped into the Sanitary canal and Third creek; Palatine and Olympia Fields provide only sketchy treatment, the disposal plant at Homewood pollutes Butterfield creek; the plant at Hazelcrest broke down and is out of action, while plants at Arlington Heights and Steger operate under an overload during wet seasons.

The result, which could be corrected by action of the county board, the report said, is pollution of many of the county's streams, ditches, and other water courses, with accompanying hazard to health.

The report recommended two steps that could be taken to correct conditions:

1. Adoption of reasonable rules and regulations by the county board requiring subdivisions to provide community sewer systems and sewage treatment works, on to connect with some existing sewerage treatment works.

2. Adoption by the unincorporated areas of one of the methods provided by the legislature for the construction of sewers.

The methods available include formation of a specific sanitary district to build local sewers, action by township authorities to construct and operate a sewer system, incorporation as a separate municipality, or annexation to an adjoining municipality.

The report also recommended that the municipalities tighten their regulations as to disposal of domestic sewage and that the regulations be enforced.

IN THESE UNITED STATES

Unique Library Started With 'Bible and Prayer'

WNU Features.

MOUNT SHERMAN, ARK.—Started 12 years ago with "a Bible and a prayer," the Wilderness Library in the deep Ozarks hill country along the Buffalo river in Arkansas now ranks as one of America's most unique educational and recreational projects.

Hillbillies, some of whom previously were 100 miles away from the nearest library, now trudge daily over the rugged, wooded trails to the log cabin library perched atop Mt. Sherman. For many of the men, women and children, the library, which serves as a community gathering center, is the only educational facility available.

Founder of this novel library is James Ted Richmond. The inspiration for his project came in France, where he remained after service in World War I to study at University of Toulouse. While there he organized a small library designed to acquaint the French with the American way of life.

Lives Atop Mountain.

After returning to America, Richmond reentered newspaper work, and while writing radio plays in Little Rock became interested in hillbillies. Deciding to live as one of the mountain folk, Richmond staked a claim for a homestead atop Mt. Sherman. Friendly mountain folk helped the newcomer build his cabin in a log raising bee.

One of Richmond's first impressions of his neighboring hillbillies was that they were deprived of educational advantages but hungry for reading matter. To fill the void, he at first began circulating his Bible. A plea to Little Rock newspaper friends netted some books, with which he started a free library in a hollow tree outside his cabin.

From this meager beginning, the Wilderness Library has grown until it now contains more than 10,000 volumes. Newspaper friends boosted Richmond's cause and books began coming in from all parts of the country. The hollow tree overflowed, forcing Richmond to move the library into his small cabin. Now the cabin is lined with shelves, with books stacked high to the rafters.

Ambitious Plans.

Improvement and enlargement of the library to convert it into a community recreational center are among Richmond's plans for the future. First, however, he hopes to build another log cabin home for himself. The encroaching book shelves have practically forced him out of his humble abode. During the summer time he even does most of his cooking on an outdoor stove, but, as the hillbillies' librarian explains, his principal foods are goat's milk and "garden sass."

Richmond also envisages that some day he will be able to use the Wilderness Library as the nucleus for a new College of the Ozarks to provide higher education for mountain boys and girls. He would like to have a jeep and library trailer to permit taking his books to homes beyond walking distance over the rough trails. He also wants the roads improved and other advantages brought to his mountain people.

Last fall Richmond decided he could achieve these objectives by political action. He announced his candidacy on the G.I. ticket for representative from Newton county in the Arkansas legislature. In his platform, he pledged himself to work for better schools, building of farm to market roads, improvement of the dairy industry, equalization of taxes and abolition of the poll tax. He was defeated, however, by the long-entrenched political machine in Newton county.

Pledges Future Fight.

"This fight for good government is only starting," Richmond insisted, adding that "there's another election coming."

On his wild homestead lands, Richmond earns his livelihood by milking about a hundred goats, raising pigs, chickens and turkeys, and growing potatoes and vegetables. If he receives $10 for goat milk sold to the creamery several miles away, he gives a dollar "as a tithe to God," $4.50 to his library and the remaining $4.50 for his own upkeep. Often he deprives himself of necessities so he can finance his rapidly expanding Wilderness Work.

In addition to the free library, the Wilderness Work includes a number of other activities launched by Richmond to improve the lot of the mountain folk.

One of the major projects is the annual Wilderness White Christmas, launched in 1933 in memory of his mother, Mrs. Etta E. Richmond. Without any compensation for his work and paying all personal expenses, Richmond directs the collection of clothing, toys, medicines and other household articles for distribution to the poor Ozark families at Christmas time.

Seeks Medical Aid.

Another objective for the hillbillies' librarian is to secure proper medical services for the mountain people. Injured and ill persons, isolated from the larger communities, have died for lack of prompt attention, Richmond reports.

"First aid is a necessity here," he says. He lists a hospital cot complete for first aid, antiseptics, surgical powders and sickroom supplies as articles most sorely needed.

"I am sure that churches, schools, clubs and individuals everywhere would help if they only knew the predicament of these people," Richmond maintains.

He is considering the possibility of establishing a non-profit educational foundation to raise money for financing the expanded Wilderness Work. Main difficulty is that he is not versed in the procedure, so he is seeking advice on the subject. His address: Ted Richmond, Wilderness Library, Mount Sherman, Ark., via Twilight Trail.

C., is able to bring readers this weekly column on problems of the veteran and serviceman and his family. Local Medical Care

Veterans' administration has announced that veterans with service-incurred disabilities in 32 states now can go to the physician of their own choice for free medical treatment under two different plans of the VA home town medical care program.

Under one plan, a non-profit organization sponsored by the state medical society handles administrative details for VA, including payment of cooperating physicians. VA in turn pays the organization a lump sum for professional services plus a small additional amount for handling administrative work. Under this plan the following states are cooperating: California, Colorado, Hawaii, Maine, Michigan, Montana, North Carolina, Oregon, South Dakota, South Carolina, Minnesota, Washington, Iowa, Wisconsin, New Jersey, New York and North Dakota.

Under the second plan all administrative work, including payment of individual doctors, is taken care of by VA and there is no go-between organization. States cooperating with this plan include: Florida, Wyoming, Louisiana, Arkansas, Connecticut, District of Columbia, Georgia, Illinois, Idaho, Indiana, Kansas, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Utah, West Virginia, Nevada and Tennessee.

Questions and Answers

Q. There was quite a bit of discussion in the Pacific about a serviceman getting back the money he was fined while in the service. If it is true, how can I get my $200 back?—G. A. P., Oakland, Calif.

A. I know of no way unless there is a review of the court martial, and even so each case is treated on its merits. Suggest you write to the Office of the Adjutant General, War department, Washington 25, D. C., and explain your case to them.

Q. During my four years in the coast guard I received a 62-day sentence in the brig plus a three-month fine due to a summary court martial. Will the government deduct those 62 days from my 93 days of terminal leave I have coming? Will that affect my bonus when they get around to giving it to me? Yes, I have the best discharge a man could get, honorable. — G. A. P., Oakland, Calif.

A. You evidently are the same man who asked the previous question in today's column. Yes, time spent in confinement under sentence of court martial is deductible from your terminal leave. Also time lost AWOL is deductible. Overnight, week-end or three-day passes, sick leave, convalescent and rehabilitation leave and temporary duty are not considered as leave under the act. So long as you have an honorable discharge, a term in the brig likely would not affect bonus, but there is as yet no law providing for a bonus.

Q. My brother has a blue discharge under Section VIII, AR-615-360 D.T.D. 16. Is he entitled to mustering-out pay or any other benefits to a veteran? Is this some sort of medical discharge or just what? Our doctor and minister cannot even explain it or at least they won't.—Mrs. G. G. W., Napoleon, Ohio.

A. A blue discharge is one other than honorable and Section 8 of army regulations covers a number of reasons why the man may be inept or unfit to be a soldier in the United States army. It may or may not be for medical reasons. Insofar as mustering out pay and benefits are concerned, the law requires an honorable discharge, but in some cases blue discharges are considered on their individual merits and a man may be entitled to veterans' benefits. The local Veterans' administration may decide the case. All such discharges are subject to review if the veteran asks it.

Q. Can you tell me how veterans are keeping up their loans made under the G.I. bill and how many are in default?—Mrs. H. E. J., Defiance, Ohio.

A. Veterans' administration says that less than one-half of one per cent of all veterans loans approved for guaranty by the administration were in default as of September 30, 1946.

Q. Are veterans of the WACs and WAVES eligible to treatment in Veterans' administration hospitals? — Mrs. A. C., Gallion, Ohio.

A. Yes, women veterans are entitled to the same medical care as male veterans. In addition they may receive treatment and hospitalization for non-service connected disabilities from private physicians and in civil hospitals as well as in VA hospitals and clinics. As of November 30 there were 923 women patients in VA hospitals and 416 in non-VA hospitals. Another 212 were patients in VA homes.

SEWING CIRCLE PATTERNS

Brief Sleeved Shirtwaist Frock
Date Frock Has Keyhole Neckline

THE most popular of all styles, the shirtwaister, is shown here with a fresh, new look. The wide extended shoulders are comfortable as can be, the neat set-in belt fits just right. You'll wear it all summer long—why not make up several in different cottons to have ready.

Pattern No. 8037 comes in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20; 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 16 requires 3½ yards of 35 or 39-inch fabric.

To keep files sharp see that their surfaces are protected when not in use.

Eggs should be kept at a temperature between 32 and 45 degrees.

Add a bit of nutmeg to the sauce for cauliflower.

To prevent lime from forming in the tea kettle, place a piece of muslin in the bottom of the kettle. The lime will stick to the muslin instead of to the kettle.

To make gloss paint flow more readily, place the container in a pan of warm water for ten minutes.

If your vacuum cleaner belt breaks when you are in the midst of cleaning, put a rubber jar ring in its place temporarily.

Wet walls inside a home should cause the householder to check the flashings. Also examine the exterior walls for holes or breaks.

Try baking biscuits for meat pies separately in one pan, while the filling cooks in another. If the baked biscuits are placed on filling just before serving, there will be no soggy.

Popular Junior Frock

A CLEVER junior date dress with a wealth of eye-appeal. Note the pretty keyhole neckline and crisp yoke treatment—the way the belt whittles your waist to doll-like proportions. It will be stunning in a gayly striped fabric, used in contrast for yoke and cap sleeves.

Pattern No. 8052 is designed for sizes 11, 12, 13, 14, 15 and 16. Size 12, 3½ yards of 35 or 39-inch.

This Home-Mixed
Cough Relief Is Hard To Beat

So Easy. No Cooking. Saves Dollars. No matter what you've been using for coughs due to colds, you'll be the first to admit that this surprising relief, mixed in your own kitchen, is hard to beat, for real results.

Make a syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and 1 cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. No cooking is needed—a child could do it. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Then put 2½ ounces of Pinex (obtained from any druggist) into a pint bottle, and fill up with your syrup. This gives you a full pint of really splendid cough relief—about four times as much for your money. Tastes fine—children love it. It never spoils.

You can feel this home mixture taking right hold of a cough. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and helps clear the air passages. Eases soreness and difficult breathing, and lets you sleep. Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, a most reliable soothing agent for throat and bronchial irritations. Just try it, and if not satisfied, your money will be refunded.

Alger Stories Are Read No More

NEW YORK. — The man whose name symbolized an entire era in American history has faded into oblivion. The man, Horatio Alger Jr., whose tales once made him a childhood hero, is practically unknown to New York boys and girls from the ages of 8 to 14, a recent poll disclosed.

Ninety-two per cent of the members of the seven boys' and girls' clubs sponsored in New York by the Children's Aid society — a total of 20,000 children — reported that they never had heard of Alger. Less than 1 per cent admitted having read any of his books.

In fact, the survey showed only 60 per cent of the children read books, and most of them preferred comic books.

The society claims a close relationship with Alger, for he once lived at its newsboys' lodging house.

Shiraz, the ancient city of Iran, dates back at least 1,500 years, and at one time held more than half a million people, three times its present count. Rugs and carpets, textiles and sugar make it industrially important. Its lasting fame has come from poets and wine. It gave the country Sa'di and Hafiz, perhaps its two greatest poets. Its wines have led some writers, ignoring the Spanish town of Jerez, to contend that Shiraz gave sherry its name.

Frosted Vegetables

Tender vegetables and fruits may be used as food after they have been slightly touched by frost, but few of these damaged products will store well for the winter season of eating. Tomatoes, peppers, squash, pumpkins and sweet potatoes are among the garden crops that need care in the frost season. Crops in small gardens can be protected from light frosts by a covering of burlap or other cloth.

Contrasts Create Illusions

Sharp contrasts in value and intensity make a room seem smaller. In other words, if walls are a very light color and woodwork is dark, the room appears smaller than it will after the woodwork is painted a shade as light and bright as the walls. If the ceiling in the room is dark, greater illusion of space can be created by painting or papering it a lighter color.

Thawing Frozen Vegetables

Most frozen vegetables can be cooked without thawing. Vegetables such as peas, corn, green beans and lima beans fall apart quickly after starting to cook, so it is not necessary to thaw them. Vegetables such as greens and asparagus cook more evenly if thawed just enough to separate the leaves or stalks.

Cooling Pressure Saucepans

Unlike ordinary pressure cookers the pressure saucepan may, when desired, be cooled quickly with cold water without danger of breaking. Pressure saucepans are not recommended for canning as there is no way of accurately gauging the pressure and temperature.

Handling Pumpkins

Vegetable specialists suggest the careful handling of pumpkins and squashes. Do not break off the stems as this makes it easy for rot organisms to enter the fruits. After the first real frost, the vine fruits must be taken indoors as leaves can no longer protect them.

Pressure Saucepan Sterilizes
In addition to its usefulness in cooking, the pressure saucepan is also used in sterilizing infants bottles and nipples. After sterilizing for ten minutes, the vent weight and cover may be left on as a means of sterile storing.

IN MEMORIAM

In memory of our friend, Anna Clemens, who passed away one year ago, February 18, 1946.

Loving and kind in all her ways, Upright and just to the end of her days. Sincere and true in her heart and mind. A beautiful memory she left behind. She had a nature you could not help loving.

A heart that was purer than gold, And to those who knew her and loved her, Her memory will never grow cold.

Listen to "Foolish Fears" on the Will County Health Department Radio Broadcast over WJOL on Friday morning, February 21, at 10:15.

Superstitions regarding the causes and cures of illnesses have retarded the acceptance of new discoveries in the principles of scientific medicine. However, where our own health is concerned misinformation or ignorance is dangerous. The more we know about good health practices, the more we can do to protect our own health.

Dr. Cecil A. Z. Sharp, County Health Officer, states that since it is often difficult to sort out the facts from the erroneous ideas, a person should be guided by the sound principles set forth by his family physician.

Local Men Attended Flying Farmer's Clinic

Local members of the Flying Farmers of Prairie Farmer Land, James Tilsey and Donald Doctor of Orland Park, participated in the First Clinic for Illinois members of the Flying Farmers of Prairie Farmer Land sponsored by the University of Illinois and Prairie Farmer WLS as the opening event of the Forty-sixth Annual Illinois Farm and Home Week, at Urbana January 27.

Two hundred and seventy five Illinois Flying Farmers, more than half flying their own planes, attended the one day clinic. The following resolutions were adopted:

We are firm believers in state rights and resent the concentration of too much power in Washington; however, the private airplane used in interstate transportation should be regulated and controlled almost entirely by federal rules and regulations.

Additional registration and collection of fees will discourage an industry that is already over taxed.

We urge Flying Farmers to make their air strips so they are easily identified from the air. State College agronomy departments can assist by developing a grass or combination of grasses different in color to be used for this purpose.

We suggest the directors of the Flying Farmers of Prairie Farmer Land look into the possibility of establishing a mutual insurance company for the benefit of the flying farmers.

We condemn the use of the airplane for fox hunting. Buzzing of any type should be discouraged. It is not only dangerous but arouses the antagonism of the community.

We earnestly hope that the Public Utilities and others will cooperate by removing wires that are hazardous to planes taking off and landing. We should suggest the power companies investigate the possibilities of developing squares of brightly colored plastic to be clamped on the wires to increase their visibility.

The next scheduled meeting of the Flying Farmers of Prairie Farmer Land is the second annual Flying Farmer Field Day to be held at the University of Illinois, August 3 and 4, under the sponsorship of the University Prairie Farmer WLS, and the Flying Farmers of Prairie Farmer Land.

Nebraska Senator Rips Russian Iron Curtain

The Russians have found one American official who can bluff—but won't be bluffed.

While in Europe on an own expense trip to study the food situation, Sen. Kenneth Wherry of Pawnee City, Neb. asked to be admitted behind the "iron curtain" into the Russian occupied zone to discuss the food situation. He said that such a trip would be impossible.

"Tell them," Wherry said, "that as a member of the U S Senate Appropriations Committee I may have something to say about the food supplies sent over here. Tell them that if they refuse, I shall be compelled to explain that no one knows what the Russians have done with UNRRA food."

Three days of dizzy negotiations followed. On the third morning Wherry said: "I can't wait longer than 11:15 today if we are going to have time to see anything. Tell them I am seeing the press at noon."

At 11:13 Russian authorities telephoned that the Senator could go wherever he liked in Russian controlled Austria.

The Americans were bowled over, including Gen. Mark Clark who had delivered Wherry's "ultimatum" to the Russian commander in Austria.

The senator's tour of the Red Zone of Austria was an eye-opener for him. For instance, the Russian workers knew nothing about UNRRA supplies, Wherry said, except that they thought they came from the Russians. America got no credit for anything and the Russians didn't deny it.

Call To Action For Religious Leaders

Declaring "an uneasy peace" is "an all too meager reward for the horrors of a global war," a call to action has been sent out to religious leaders of America by a Committee of One Hundred preparing for the 21st International Sunday School Convention to be held at Des Moines, Iowa, July 23-27, under the auspices of the International Council of Religious Education.

Serving on the Committee of One Hundred, of which James L. Kraft, Chicago, is chairman are leaders in the fields of government, economics, education and religion, including Dr. Mary Alice Jones; Dr. Fred D. Stone; Dr. James Eichelberger, and Edward L. Ryerson Jr., all of Chicago; Fred Kudlata, Cicero, Ill. Walter W. Muller, Peoria; Dr. Raymond R. Peters, Elgin, and Benjamin Sites, Elmhurst.

Pointing out that "the Church faces a chaotic and confused world which seems bent upon self destruction," the call makes a stronger plea for the Protestant evangelical forces to "mobilize themselves for effective Christian teaching."

"Here at home we see rising social and economic tensions, racial antagonisms and a loss of national morale," the call asserts. "In small communities and large cities juvenile delinquency, broken homes, sex immorality, alcoholism, and an amazing indifference to political morality alarms us all. A wide spread ignorance of the teachings of the Bible disarms all serious persons."

The Christian Gospel is the only hope in all of this tumult, the call to action declared, and it issued a challenge to Sunday School superintendents, teachers and officers to rally in a great united effort "to arouse people to a deeper concern for the moral and spiritual needs of persons".

It is expected that 10,000 lay workers in Sunday schools of the United States and Canada from 40 Protestant denominations and 173 state, city and provincial councils of churches and religious education will attend the Convention, according to the Rev. Carl H. Wilhelm, convention executive secretary for the International Council.

The Paperhangers took the lead from the Oilers Monday night when they swept three games from the Oilers, while the Oilers were dropping three games to the Robins.

Bob Clark's 525 series and Andy Buschell's 530 series were the big factors in the Paperhangers' victory. Cooper & Hostert's V-Eighters dropped the Bankers deeper into the cellar when they took two games. W. Hamilton had a 506 series.

In the Oilers and Robins games, Monday night, the Robins caught the Oilers at their own game by not talking and out bowling them. The Robins were putting on a rally in each frame and had "Robbie" hanging on the ropes in keeping up with his team mates. Every time Spliss started with a spare or strike, the boys followed thru for a "beer" frame much to the dismay of the once mighty Oilers.

Be out next Monday night fans, and watch the show-down between the new leaders, the Paperhangers, and the 2nd place Oilers. John Scarth says, the Oilers are all washed-up. But Charlie Burkhardt says, wait till we get them on the alleys next Monday night.

Folks, it looks like a battle of the century, so do not miss it.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, February 9, was:

"SPIRIT"

The Golden Text was:

"This is the word of the Lord unto Zerrubbabel, saying, Not by might, nor by power, but by my spirit, saith the Lord of hosts" (Zech. 4: 6).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible:

"For though there be that are called gods, whether in heaven or in earth, (as there be gods many, and lords many,) But to us there is but one God, the Father, of whom all are things and we in him; . . . God is a Spirit: and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth" (I Cor. 8: 5, 6; John 4: 24).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy:

"In Christian Science, Spirit, as a proper noun, is the name of the Supreme Being. It means quantity and quality, and applies exclusively to God. The modifying derivatives of the word spirit refer only to quality, not to God. . . . Spirit being God, there is but one Spirit, for there can be but one infinite and therefore one God. . . . Spirit, God, has created all in and of Himself. Spirit never created matter. There is nothing in Spirit out of which matter could be made, for as the Bible declares, without the Logos, the Aeon, or Word of God, 'was not anything made that was made.' Spirit is the only substance, the invisible and indivisible infinite God" (pp. 93, 334, 335).

That Ring Around the Bathtub

Jeb Crowell blew his top the other day. Seems that for weeks he's been trying to get his youngsters to scrub out the bathtub after using it. And this night he sees two rings around it—one where young Sonny left off, and another about Pinky's level.

He raves and rants—and takes it out on the missus for her lack of discipline. And later that evening he sees her quietly polishing the hardwood table that's right by his chair. She's removing the rings he's left there with his evening glass of beer!

From now on, Jeb's careful to put his glass down on the table cover—like the missus does. And I hear he's a little more forgiving about rings around the bathtub. Just keeps on patiently reminding.

From where I sit, there are little annoyances in every family—conflicting habits and opinions in every community. A little patience—a little more "forgive and let live" is the only antidote.

Out of Focus Pictures Of Jesus of Nazareth

The following is reprint from the December issue of "The Retail Coalman", and because of the unusualness of the approach of a common subject, we are glad to pass it on. Dr. Preston Bradley read it on one of his broadcast recently. Mr. L. G. Bruder of Mokena supplied us with the copy.

Last December the world again celebrated the birth of Jesus of Nazareth, the one thousand nine hundred and forty-sixth anniversary. For years I have hoped to find the time to write a character sketch—a journalist's character sketch—of this Jewish boy around whose philosophy a certain civilization has been built. It would not be an easy thing to do because the general run of pictures of him have been sadly out of focus; even the civilization which takes his name is wholly out of focus with his character and teachings.

His historians insisted upon writing about him from their own personal points of view. Matthew, for instance, started his biography with a genealogical chart to prove to the Jews that Jesus was heir to the throne of David, and on what we call "Palm Sunday," the Jews, themselves accepted him as such and carried him into Jerusalem with royal honors.

Mark seems to have wanted to prove to the Jews that Jesus was the fulfillment of the prophecies of their major and minor prophets—and the triumphal entrance into Jerusalem and the crucifixion at passover time may have given point to his narrative. That is, there was the first selection of the "lamb without blemish" and the spilling of blood to appease the wrath of God.

Luke was a physician and seems to have wanted to picture Jesus as the real founder of the much later school of mental therapeutics.

John cut across lots and arrived, with no possible uncertainty, at the conclusion that Jesus was one of three Gods—"the Word became flesh and dwelt among us."

Then Saul of Tarsus, using Jesus as a pretext, wrote out and organized a religion of his own—and most "ministers of the gospel" have adopted his version. Of all the out of focus pictures of Jesus, that of Saul of Tarsus is the strangest. Paul serves as the master pattern of all bureaucrats; he insists upon telling—in the name of Jesus—everybody what to do and how to do it; a veritable meddlesome fuss-budget.

Then the painters came along to give their conception of The Master—and turned out a painting of a tubercular individual with long silky whiskers.

To use one of Paul's expressions—"seeing we are surrounded by so great a cloud of witnesses"—I have wondered what would result if we could get a picture of Jesus which was in focus with his character and teachings. I want a picture of what he meant to the human race—not merely to the Jewish hierarchy or to the ambitions of Saul of Tarsus. I cannot escape the conclusion that the whole picture would come into focus when this tall, powerful athletic figure was encountered on the streets with a harlot in front of him and with an angry mob behind him, demanding that she be stoned to death. Quietly he stooped and began to write with his fingers in the sand. Then, with an upward and sidewise glance, filled with mischievous humor, he said something to the effect that maybe she was guilty and probably deserved death but—

"Let him that is without sin cast the first stone."

The biting humor of Abe Lincoln!

It was fun rediscovering some of the ridiculous beliefs held by the ancients as revealed in their gardening and botanical books. Wondrous indeed were the properties of the herb. With this charm, the early botanist was equal to any emergency.

A panacea for anything and everything was the herb. Toothache. The bald pate. Melancholia. Courage. Romance. Snoozing. Imbibing too freely. Too, the old boys had some odd notions concerning the proper growing of herbs. One throve best when stolen from a neighbor's garden—another, when sown with cursing and railing. This and other plant lore is all there in THE HERB GARDEN.

THE HERB GARDEN

Good Housewife provide, ere a sickness do come, of sundry good things in her house to have some. Good Aqua Composita, and vinegar tart. Good Rose-water and Treacle, for agues that burn. Cold herbs in her garden, for agues that burn. In health to be stirring, shall profit thee best. In sickness bath trouble, seek quiet and rest. Remember thy soul, let no fancy prevail. make ready to God-ward, let faith never fail. the sooner thyself thou comittest to God. the sooner he ceaseth to scourge with his rod. THOMAS TUSSEY, Gen.

HISTORY IN MINIATURES . . . Crowded into the 4,000 square feet of Roadside America, world's greatest indoor miniature village, is the panorama of American history: (1) Sleepy Hollow is typical of the pioneer days of the West; (2) Shrine church is a replica of a memorial chapel in the Alps; (3) a pioneer village of 300 years ago is reconstructed; (4) the airport, laid out like a real field, lends note of modernity; (5) an idea of the scale on which the miniatures are built is obtained by comparing Laurence Gieringer with the figures he is placing on a railroad station platform, and (6) the village of Fairfield represents the modern era.

Picturesque Miniature Village Depicts History of America

WNU Features.

Childhood disillusionment at the shattering of a dream did not deter Laurence Gieringer; instead, it embarked him on a hobby which over a span of 44 years has resulted in creation of a picturesque miniature village which has attracted nationwide attention and lured millions of visitors.

With the passionate covetousness of a child, the 5-year-old Laurence used to sit nightly in the window of his home in a Pennsylvania valley and gaze longingly at a house on the mountainside—a toy house, it seemed to him, as its lights blinked enticingly in the distance. He wanted that tiny house, wanted to pick it up in his hands and bring it home.

When his repeated pleas to set out in quest of his house were ignored, the little boy finally became desperate and, stuffing a banana and a few crackers into his pockets, trudged off up the mountainside in search for the little house. Searching parties were out all night and at 6 o'clock in the morning the frantic parents finally discovered the grimy but undaunted boy two-thirds the way up the mountainside. Bitter at being overhauled, the boy was comforted only when his parents agreed to take him to the end of the road.

Dream Shattered.

Disillusionment clouded Laurence's eyes when he beheld just another ordinary sized house with no lights at all in the bright morning, no enchantment, no magic lure.

But Laurence Gieringer's dream was not ended; in fact, it had only begun. Today, at 54, he owns countless lighted houses that he can pick up in his hands, along with churches, barns, bridges, highways, railroads, lakes, fields, grist mills, factories and scores of other miniature models depicting the architectural and industrial panorama of the America of the last few hundred years.

Collectively they are known as Roadside America, which is situated four miles west of Hamburg, Pa., between Harrisburg and Allentown.

Roadside America had its beginning four years after Laurence's abortive attempt to bring home the lighted house from the mountaintop. With his younger brother, Paul, he had climbed another mountain near Reading. Far below them Reading looked like a city inhabited by doll men. Fascinated by the sight, Laurence said eagerly: "Paul, wouldn't it be swell to build little houses the same size they look from here?" Thus was born the idea which was to grow into a project enchanting millions of visitors every year.

Delving into their venture with enthusiasm, the boys scoured the library for books on American architecture from the pioneer days to modern times. A kindly art teacher gave them drawing lessons at three cents for plain sketching, five cents for pastel work, the fees covering only the cost of material.

Early difficulties soon induced Laurence to adopt an arbitrary scale of three-eighths of an inch to a foot, a scale he has employed through all the intervening years.

Pictures and stories of the way the early settlers in America had lived induced Gieringer to build history into his miniatures. His models, he decided, could show the development of American home and business life as exemplified in the structure of homes and business buildings.

As a result, there now are three separate sections, one depicting the life of the early settlers, another that of Pennsylvania at the turn of the century and a third showing a modern setting. Gieringer plans a fourth eventually—his version of the village of tomorrow.

Built From Scraps.

Scraps of wood, discarded tin cans, wire, pieces of metal, pipe cleaners, paper and numerous other odds and ends have been utilized as construction materials for Gieringer's intricate models.

An idea of the scope of the exhibit may be gained by noting some of the materials which have gone into its making. They include 9,520 feet of board lumber, 4,000 feet of building paper, 1,728 feet of railroad and trolley track, 11,080 feet of electric wire, 513 light bulbs, 12,000 pounds of plaster, 4,000 miniature figures, 10,000 miniature trees and shrubs, 250 pounds of nails, 42 gallons of paint, two barrels of green sawdust, six tons of stone, 8,000 pounds of sand, 145 miniature railroad cars and 1,700 feet of tracks for trains and trolleys.

Highlight among the miniatures is a high-spired church with beautifully handpainted windows, a task that required months of exacting labor as Gieringer sought means of creating stained glass. As visitors mill about the village, the lights are dimmed and from the open door of the church pours religious music from a tiny organ. Outside the church a ragged tramp leans lazily against a white fence, a dog at his heels.

When the organ strains fade, a different type of music issues from a large barn, in which an old-fashioned barn dance is progressing. Nearby planes seem about to take off from an airport while a few feet away people are packed into a grandstand watching a baseball game.

Animation marks the exhibits. There are youngsters walking on narrow curbstones, a boy whose feet are tangled in an electric wire, dogs sniffing at fire hydrants, women hanging out their washing or gossiping over back fences, trolleys and train in operation, water wheels turning grist mills.

Receive Wide Acclaim.

The Gieringer exhibits have been widely heralded as the world's greatest miniature village and the most unique and detailed masterpiece ever evolved.

A staunch exponent of hobbies as a means of preventing juvenile delinquency, Gieringer insists that "hobbies keep children off the street," adding that "if youngsters' hands are busy, they don't get into mischief." His dream is to see establishment of a national hobby center where exhibits of all kinds can be shown to inspire other hobbyists.

Throughout the years both Mr. and Mrs. Gieringer have worked with countless children from nearby schools and orphanages.

Although Gieringer allows boys training in his workshop to use mechanical equipment, all of Roadside America has been built completely by hand and with ordinary carpenter tools.

Originally set up as a Christmas display in the Gieringer home for showing to neighbors and visitors, the miniatures later were exhibited in a Reading fire house and in a local park, all earnings going to charity. The present Roadside America was established in 1941, a portion of the proceeds still going to charity. Although wartime gasoline rationing shattered attendance, a record number of visitors viewed the displays last season and still larger crowds are expected this summer.

Good Farm Wiring Is Held Essential

Expensive to Pay for Preventive Power Loss

"Anything less than good wiring on the farmstead is not only a serious bottleneck to successful use of electricity, but usually causes dissatisfaction and needless expense in the use of electricity for anything beyond lighting and minimum power uses," William A. Ritt, Minneapolis, Minn., declared at the national farm electrification conference.

In planning the wiring for a farm, Ritt declared, the average farm must be considered as an industrial plant, a production and processing plant for products. The greater the degree of processing performed on any farm, the greater is the return in terms of farm income, he explained.

No matter what efficient equipment the farmer may employ to arrive at more complete and profitable electrification, its successful operation depends upon a good wiring installation.

Larger capacity service entrances, heavier conductors to farmstead buildings and also for serving the higher horsepower motors now being used, an increased number of circuits and more attention to balancing loads among the various circuits, are among the outstanding needs of farm wiring systems today, Ritt said.

MISS SLICK CHICK OF 1947?

WE ARE RESENTFUL . . . Hens, resentful and envious of the "Slick Chick" designation, which with utter abandon has been bestowed upon human females, at long last have come to the fore and demanded their equal rights. The Poultry and Egg National board, realizing the justice of their claims, is conducting a nationwide search for the most beautiful hen in all America, who will be crowned "Miss Slick Chick of 1947," and will be guest of honor at world premiere of "The Egg and I."

Planting Trees

Ease in planting trees at uniform distances in straight rows may be secured by the board marker shown in illustration. The length of the board will depend on the type of tree and distance to be spaced.

Home Garden Goals Established for 1947

Six million farm gardens and 12 million urban, suburban, and small-town gardens will be the goal of the 1947 national garden program. The necessity and desirability for the garden program is to insure better nutrition in millions of American homes, to help all families in meeting the cost of living and to provide better qualities of vegetables and fruits, especially for the lower-income families.

FOR some odd reason, proving they are new members of the magnate tribe, neither Bing Crosby nor Bob Hope has claimed any pennant for the Pirates or the Indians.

As you may know both are now closely involved in the standings of these two clubs and both will need some slight improvement before they reach the gonfalon heights.

At the moment, magnate Crosby already has wagered a golf ball with magnate Crosby that the Indians finish higher up in the American league race than the Pirates finish in the National. Hope wanted to make this a box of golf balls, but Crosby demurred, recalling the spots both occupied last fall.

No one can blame Crosby for this careful attitude although he already has strengthened the Pitt roster with a player by the name of Greenberg. But after all, the Indians have Bob Feller. They also have a shortstop-second base combination in Lou Boudreau and Joe Gordon that will be worth watching.

"Joe Gordon is too fine a ball player, too strong a competitor to have another off year," Hope tells you.

"Joe was just another war-athlete victim. Before that he was one of the greatest defensive second basemen in baseball history and a dangerous hitter. Like many other baseball and football players he had something of a slumping spell after leaving the army, but it will be a different story this next season. Joe is still young and in good physical shape. Boudreau is also young. He is one of the star shortstops of baseball. This pair will put on plenty of fireworks together."

Gordon's Future

We look for the same result. Gordon has been too fine a ball player and too much of an athlete to be placed on the waning list. There is a good chance that he will have one of his best seasons. Strength through the shortstop-second base position can make a big difference to any club and this Cleveland combination may easily match the Red Sox pair or the Cardinal-Dodgers outfits.

Anyway, "Hope still springs eternal in the baseball breast," where Hope is still hopeful of big days ahead.

Apparently Crosby and Hope had to find some way to keep busy and kill time.

All Bing does is to handle a 'big radio job, make motion pictures, do a world of recording and put on golf tournaments. All Bob Hope does is work on radio, make pictures and appear at practically every luncheon and banquet function along the west coast. Now they are in baseball. It might be remembered that only recently in tournament play, Bing shot a 75 at golf while Bob is around 78 or 80. If word gets out they are likely to spend most of their rounds signing autographs.

Both are red hot baseball fans and both hope to drop in on their respective teams when spring training starts. Bing's Pirates have a long way to move before crashing the first division. The Cardinals and Dodgers are the first two road blocks. The Cubs will be better, and probably luckier than they were last season. The Braves and Phillies will be stronger teams. So will the Giants. If Bing had a pitching arm, the Pirates could use that better than his golf swing.

Eagle vs. Lion

No matter how you may figure it all out, the two top international rivals in sport are the United States and Great Britain. They remain the two great sporting nations of what we call the world today.

In all fairness it must be admitted that England and Scotland are outnumbered by United States about 3 to 1, so the odds should belong our way. But without England and Scotland there would be no international competition. Not with Russia, not with France, Italy, China, Japan, Germany or Britain. It could be different with Sweden and Finland in distance races.

The point is that the British isles provide the U. S. their only competition at this date. By that I mean that England and Scotland can supply their share of trouble in golf—including the Walker cup matches next May. They may even win this test if the winds come up and the rains arrive.

British Golfers

In Dai Rees they have one of the best golf professionals I have seen. Rees would be an even bet against Hogan or Nelson on any British course. If the Ryder cup matches were played over a seaside British links, the odds would be even. That's how good he is. It is certainly no part of a push-over that the U. S., with the strong team now picked, can get by with the next Walker cup matches. The British have an even chance over their own terrain.

It may be caused by disorder of kidney function that permits poisonous waste to accumulate. For truly many people feel tired, weak and miserable when the kidneys fail to remove excess acids and other waste matter from the blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling. Sometimes frequent and early urination with smarting and burning is another sign that something is wrong with the kidneys or bladder.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won countrywide approval than on something less favorably known. Doan's have been tried and tested many years. Are at all drug stores. Get Doan's today.

Circuit Rider Travels 954 Miles Weekly To Reach Parish

KANSAS CITY, MO. — Traveling nearly a thousand miles every week-end to preach to his congregation, the Rev. E. V. Johnson, 33-year-old former army chaplain, ranks as the modern version of the old-time circuit rider. A train, however, supplants the horse as his mode of transportation.

Every week from Tuesday through Friday, Mr. Johnson attends classes at Central Baptist Theological seminary here. On Friday he hops a train for his pastorate at Locust Grove, Tex. Leaving Kansas City at 9 p. m. Friday, he has a 12-hour train trip before reaching Canadian, Tex., where his wife and two children, Sharon, 8, and Mary Vesta, 4, are waiting to take him the 16 miles to Locust Grove by car.

On the return trip, Mr. Johnson leaves Locust Grove on Monday to catch a train back in time for opening of classes Tuesday morning. The round trip is 954 miles. A railroad pass is a big lift for Mr. Johnson's weekly trip.

Locust Grove is a small community where church services are held in a schoolhouse, but the young minister is spearheading a movement to build a church.

Before entering the army as a chaplain, Mr. Johnson was pastor of the Boswell, Okla., Baptist church.

LAST LOVER

BY Helen Jeppings Miller

Jill McFarlane, whose father, Richard, disappeared in World War I, falls in love with Lieut. Spang Gordon. He tells her that her brother, Ric, is seeing a divorcee and she is upset to find the woman in question, Sandra Calvert, is an older, hardened woman. Spang says good-bye and later, while riding with Dave Patterson, a family friend, she is thrown from her horse and taken to the hospital. That night Richard returns home. He tells her mother, Julia, that he assumed a new name, that of Captain Mackey, and is stationed at the same camp as Ric. Julia is heartbroken that he never acknowledged his children and is determined to keep them from knowing the truth.

CHAPTER XI

"What do you want me to say, Jill? I've told you that there's nothing wrong between Dave and me. I'm sorry if I look worried, but I'm trying to run a farm under pretty serious difficulties. I have a son gone off to war, and I'm not as young as you are."

Jill sighed, "You're certainly a devilishly stubborn female, Dooley McFarlane." Then she raised her head suddenly, and her eyes widened and blackened with panic. "Dooley, is it Ric? Has something happened?"

"What could happen? I haven't even had a letter from Ric. What made you say that, Jill?" she asked, her voice sharpening a little.

"Well, knowing Ric's capacity for getting himself into jams and your capacity for suffering about them, it was a logical question, wasn't it?"

"Logical enough. But why the panicky attack? Do you know something about Ric that I don't know?"

"No." Jill kept her eyes on the ceiling. "I told you—I only saw him for a few minutes. He had some kind of duty."

She could not add the blonde Mrs. Calvert to Dooley's mental burden now. When Ric was shipped out from Ridley Field that would all end, anyway.

"Dooley, if you sent Spang a registered letter telling him about me, it would be forwarded, wouldn't it?"

"I don't know much about army routine, Jill. You'll hear from him, won't you, when he has a definite address?"

"I don't know. He might be where he couldn't write, maybe for weeks—might be for months. Dooley—he kissed me good-bye!" Tears squeezed between Jill's guarded eyelids.

"That makes you one of the great company of women who wait, then. And your job is to wait patiently, and not worry Spang with a broken arm that will be healed before he hears about it."

"The trouble is, I don't know what I'm waiting for."

"You aren't engaged to your lieutenant, then?"

"No—he just kissed me and said to keep that till he came back. And, Dooley—sometimes they don't come back! Father didn't come back!"

She did not see the quick, drained spasm that changed her mother's face into a hollow mask of torment.

"That's part of it, Jill. That's what I wanted to spare you, if I could."

"It wasn't your fault that I fell, head over heels. I did it with my eyes open. And I'm willing to pay. I won't weasel, no matter what life hands me. I'm a McFarlane, like you. But—not to have anything! You had memories—you had Ric and me. I have nothing!"

John I. Denounces His Son

Memories! Julia caught herself before she laughed aloud. Memories that burned and shamed.

"I had my children," she controlled her voice, "but there were times before your grandfather came and got us when I didn't know what you were going to eat. I was younger than you, I had always been taken care of, I hadn't even any common sense. There are compensations, Jill. Personally, I think your Spang an extraordinarily wise and decent young man. He was taking care of you. Not many men have the strength and foresight to do that when they fall in love."

"But—I don't even know that he did fall in love, Dooley! If you think he's being noble, I'll try to think that, too. But listen, we needn't have two lorn women in one house. You go ahead and marry Dave."

Julia started a little. Then she said, "Dave hasn't asked me. It would be more maidenly to wait until he did, don't you think? I'm going now, darling. Your grandfather and I are still trying to run a farm."

She had to tell Dave. That thought was heavy on her mind and heart as she drove the station-wagon through the town. Dave did not know, as yet, that Richard McFarlane had come back.

Sharing the weight of this new problem with him would be a relief, though not kind to Dave. She could not talk to Richard's father. The old man had withdrawn into a savage mood of gloom, and her attempts to draw him out of it had only irritated him; she could not hurt him any more.

There was a personal humiliation for John I. McFarlane in the situation, a sense of responsibility that showed in his haunted eyes and uncertain gestures. He had flared at her once, trying to ease his own torment, she knew.

"If you had let me go ahead as I wanted to, you'd be in a decent position now," he had snapped. "You'd have the advantage."

"But Richard isn't dead," Julia reminded him. "Richard is still Richard, he's still your son, he's still my husband, even if for years he has been living a lie."

"I have no son!" he cried, his throat working. "I never had a son! I spawned a creature—something with no honor, no manhood. I owe the world an apology for that mischance. But I will not dignify Richard McFarlane by owning him as my son. He has thrown away his name, he threw away his wife and children, he can throw his father away, too!"

He had marched out with his back stiff, and Julia had resisted the impulse to follow and comfort him. This was something they must each bear alone. She with her harried anxieties and mortification, and this proud, stricken old man with his bitter memories.

She would talk to Dave now, she decided. He was sitting in his little caddy in the bank, when she went in, the niche where he met farmers and handled crop loans and mortgages. He looked up at her with a twinkling smile and sprang quickly to his feet, to pull out a chair for her.

"Sit down, Dooley. How's Jill?"

"She's quite unhappy, but that will pass. The arm is healing nicely. Are you busy, Dave? Will you be free soon?"

"I'm free now if you need me. Something wrong, Dooley?"

"I want to talk to you. Could we go out and sit in my car?"

Dave reached for his hat, slammed a drawer shut.

"Come along," he said.

Julia started the station-wagon when Dave had climbed up beside her.

"It's too hot to sit still. I'll find a shady place. Or I'll keep driving."

"Find a shady place. Don't wear out your tires."

Dave asked no questions. He did not hurry her. That hurt, too, his sensitive understanding of her mood.

Dave Is Told About Richard

"Dave, Richard is alive."

There was a sharp silence, so intense that Julia's skin began to prickle. Then Dave said, hoarsely, "How do you know?"

"I've seen him." She kept her eyes straight ahead. "He came to the house Sunday night."

"He's in the army," Julia went on. "He's a captain in the air corps. He's at the same field where Ric is."

"So—all this time—"

"All this time," she repeated flatly, "he had stayed away because he didn't want to come back!"

"The bound!" Dave snapped. "And I suppose now—when you're on your feet, when things would be easy for him—he has changed his mind?"

"He said," Julia gave a hard little laugh, "that he realized suddenly that he missed me!"

"Very suddenly—after twenty-five years! Did he have any excuse—any explanation?"

"He didn't offer any excuse. It seems he got bored with the war and wandered off to Paris. In the confusion after the armistice he got hold of some other man's papers. So he changed his name."

"Dave drew a relieved breath. "Well, that lets you out, Dooley. He can't expect to be taken back, after this."

"I don't think he expects it. He didn't talk about it. He was very casual. You know Richard, that impervious, arrogant way he had? He hasn't changed."

"He came expecting you to swoon with delight at seeing him, no doubt, and when you weren't overcome he kept a remote and slightly condescending attitude. Yes, I know."

"I don't know what he expected. He came in as coolly as though he'd only been gone a week. He asked about the children. I was so thankful neither of them was there. John I. was in a rage. He wouldn't even shake hands with Richard. I'm so sorry for John I. I ache all over."

"Chin up, Dooley. This puts an end to all the uncertainty—at least all the unease that has been making you unhappy so long."

"I wish I could see the end," she said.

"But it's perfectly clear," he argued. Then sharply, "You don't mean that you want him back—now?"

She shook her head. "He shamed me, Dave. I know that I was young and silly. I suppose I bored him after the first excitement of being in love with me cooled into commonplace responsibility, into the dreary chore of having to clothe and feed me, having the babies coming—all that."

"Dooley, you're not going to blame yourself for this man's worthlessness, his utter lack of decency or honor!"

"I have to blame myself, Dave. Another woman might have made a man of Richard, might have made him want to be a man, at least."

"Richard McFarlane had every chance. He threw his chances away. He deserves no sympathy. I won't let you harrow yourself like this."

She gave a little choking sigh. "I suppose I should try to act like an outraged wife. Perhaps I can when I've got over being stunned."

"The next move," Dave said in a calm, business-like tone, "is for you to get a divorce."

She shivered a little. "That's just it, Dave. I can't do it."

"What do you mean, you can't? If twenty-five years of callous desertion isn't legal grounds for divorce, I don't know what would be."

"Of course I have grounds," she agreed, "but Richard isn't Richard now. He's Captain Roger Mackey of the air corps. Think what it would mean! A nation-wide sensation. A military investigation. A cheap story to spread in black headlines in the cheap press. Humiliation for me and for Richard's old father. And for Ric and Jill—Dave, I don't even dare to think of what it would do to Ric and Jill!"

"They aren't children, Dooley. They're adults and strong enough to bear the truth."

A Struggle of Torn Emotions

"Even if they are strong—and Ric isn't strong, Dave. I'm his mother, but I'm not foolishly blind. I know that Ric has a weak strain in him. But even agreeing that they are mature enough to face a ghastly situation like this, think of the cruelty of it. I'd be destroying the one fine thing I've been able to give them. I gave them a hero for a father—a dead hero—and I can't snatch that father away and show them a coward instead! It would do incalculable harm. To Ric especially. Can't you see what it would do to Ric, when he's so unbalanced anyway by the unbalanced recklessness now in the world? Can't you see that it would ruin him? He's proud. He'd despise me, undoubtedly. I can't do it, Dave."

"Why should your son despise you? You aren't talking sense."

"Because his father despised me—enough to abandon me. I'd be a pathetic figure in my children's eyes. I'd be pitied by people who have respected me. I can't do it. I can't."

Dave leaned forward, his face gray and grave and weary. "All right, Dooley. If that's the way you feel, there's nothing I can say."

"But—how else can I feel?" Julia heard a voice that broke and cried, and was a little startled to discover that it was her own. "I'm trapped. There's no way out for me. You can see that, surely?"

"I don't know whether I see it or not, Dooley. I see you, bent on sacrificing yourself still further to this dream you've harbored all these years. Tell me one thing. Are you still in love with Richard McFarlane?"

She set her face, stilled its quivering.

"No, I'm not in love with him any more. I think that died, long ago. I know now that it died. Not even a spark came alive when I saw him. I had only had one feeling—an outraged and terribly hurt indignation. He made me cheap in my own eyes, Dave, and that can be a horrible feeling. I was something that had been thrown away."

REDS MAY HAVE A-BOMB

WASHINGTON. — It took breathing-taking Bob Gros of California to do what no diplomat or newsman so far has done regarding the A-bomb and Russia. He got a hint from Soviet Ambassador Novikov that Russia has either the secret of the A-bomb or an adequate defense against it.

Gros, a California lecturer who annually interviews more Washington bigwigs in 24 hours than the average newsman does in one week, called on Ambassador Novikov the other day and at the end of his interview asked: "Do you have anything you wish to say to the American people?"

"Yes," replied the ambassador. "You Americans should not rely too much on the A-bomb. Against France, Italy, Germany, yes. But against Russia, No. You should not depend on it."

"That, Mr. Ambassador," suggested Gros, "sounds as if the Russians have developed a defense against the A-bomb."

"Yes," replied Ambassador Novikov, "this and more. I do not wish to say anything further."

This significant statement ended the interview.

MORE WOMEN IN GOVERNMENT

President Truman's failure to appoint more women to high office was tactfully laid before the President by a group of women.

Mrs. La Felle Dickinson, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, headed the delegation and told Mr. Truman quite frankly that women generally were disturbed because he hadn't appointed as many women to government jobs as Mr. Roosevelt had. She reminded the President that the state department had built up a roster of 80 well-known American women capable of handling important government work and urged him to bring the list up to date.

Dr. Katherine McHale of the Association of University Women, was equally strong in urging appointment of more women to government.

Mr. Truman replied that he would like to appoint more women to jobs but it was difficult to get the right person for the right job.

"I watched President Roosevelt work for a long time," Truman continued. "I knew then, but didn't realize fully, just how large a portion of the President's time was taken in finding the right people for the right job. I want you to know that nobody makes my appointments for me. I make them on the basis of my own judgment."

Mrs. Dickinson strongly urged appointment of a woman to the existing vacancy in the Federal Communications commission, but didn't suggest any names. The women's club leader pointed out that women make up the overwhelming majority of daytime radio listeners, yet had no representation whatsoever on the FCC.

Mrs. Dickinson also proposed that a woman be named assistant secretary of state, because of the enormous interest and great stake that the women of the country have in keeping the peace. Mr. Truman said the suggestion was interesting.

NO LAME-DUCK JOBS

Here's some bad news for Democratic congressmen and senators defeated in the last election who have been priming the White House for federal jobs:

President Truman has adopted a new policy — no lame-duck appointments, barring exceptional cases.

This is the story behind the hope of Sen. Jim Mead's friends to land him a diplomatic post or some other top job.

Truman and Mead are old and close friends, fought shoulder to shoulder in many senate battles and when Truman became vice president in 1944, Mead succeeded him as chairman of the war investigating committee. However, several times recently when White House advisers raised the question of putting the able New Yorker somewhere on the federal payroll, Truman replied with a flat "no."

"If the people of a state or a congressional district have decided that they don't want a man in Washington by voting him out of office, why should I go against their judgment by appointing him to some job as a reward for being defeated?" the President said.

So far, none of Truman's advisers has thought up a good answer.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

Civilian secretaries of state who for years have ridden in ordinary Pullmans are wondering how come the military get the use of private railroad cars—in peacetime. General Marshall rode in a private car from Chicago to Washington after his army plane was forced down by bad weather, whereas Henry L. Stimson, two times secretary of war and once secretary of state, never got any higher than a drawing room. . . . General Eisenhower also has a yen for private cars.
